

The following pages list wines chosen with care, with intent, and with enjoyment.

In addition to a blossoming program of wines from the Pacific Northwest, we continue to pay our respects to the classic food wines of the Old World.

Living in the midst of a veritable cornucopia of gastronomic specialties, we involve ourselves primarily with products that are harvested and produced within 100 miles of Victoria. The vineyards on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands are magical places. If you have the opportunity to visit one, or several, do yourself the favour. Smell the cedar as you walk in the fields, take in the salt air, and then feel the influences of the unique terroir come forth from the glass as you sample the wines in the tasting room.

The British Columbia wine industry has grown from a fledgling unknown to a world-renowned competitor. It boasts award-winning wines produced in the widely diverse terrains, climates, and conditions found in this vast land. The Okanagan region is particularly well known for its magnificent, terraced vineyards. This region is truly blessed to have a climate with temperature extremes hot to cold, a climate tailor-made for growing the perfect grape. Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, commonly referred to as The Wine Islands, are experimenting with many varieties and having some great successes.

Since the year 2000, 115 new wineries have opened in British Columbia. There are almost 10,000 acres of grape vines planted in British Columbia, producing over 15 million litres of wine presently, compared to 5 million litres 15 years ago, attesting to the rampant growth and quality of the product.

At the Hotel Grand Pacific there are no rules about pairings; we believe that each guest's personal tastes determine the true enjoyment of a well-made match. Having said that, we are happy to share our knowledge, to provide guidance, and to answer questions about wines from less familiar producers and regions. We are partnered with the International Sommelier Guild in Victoria, and every server and manager is trained to offer advice through this program.

We hope you enjoy your perusal of our wine list. With many selections to choose from, our wine list offers bottles from almost every wine producing country. We treat our wines with care, housing them in temperature and humidity controlled units, and serving them in Riedel crystal stemware. The best deserves the best.

Yours sincerely,

Janis Goard, Director of Food and Beverage, Sommelier

Jeremy Pott, Restaurant Manager, Sommelier

Carmen Parry, Assistant Restaurant Manager, Sommelier

About the Green Dot •

“Sustainability” is having the capacity to endure. In ecology, sustainability describes how biological systems remain diverse and productive over time. The following are just a few of the companies who personify the meaning of harmony in their practices and in the way they interact with their surroundings. Their success is for you to decide.

From the Republic of Fiji, Fiji Water is bottled in the rainforest from an aquifer in the Yaqara Valley, which they protect and cherish. They can proudly say that over 95% of all waste generated at the production plant is sorted and recycled. Fiji Water is the first carbon-negative brand of bottled water.

reSIProcate coffee is an offering of fairly traded, organic coffee that is contributing to providing a better life, and a more promising future for the families that grow the coffee, and the families and communities involved at every step in the coffee process from farm to table.

On Granville Island, in Vancouver, British Columbia, Masa Shiroki has been producing Sake, by hand-pressing and hand-bottling top quality Japanese sakamai, since January 2007. It is left unfiltered and free of preservatives to showcase the delicate flavours. Masa has been experimenting with rice plantings in BC to produce truly Canadian Sake.

Sea Cider, on Vancouver Island, grows over 60 varieties of certified organic apples to make cider. They also purchase apples from the Fruit Tree Project through Lifecycles. The Fruit Tree Project harvests local apples from private trees in Victoria backyards that would otherwise go to waste and produces ciders and other products from them.

Tugwell Creek Honey Farm and Meadery in Sooke, BC, was licensed as the first Meadery in BC, in 2003. Owner, Robert Liptrot, can be quoted as saying “1 of every 3 mouthfuls of food we eat, bees are responsible for”. Their meads reflect harmony and balance by blending varietal honeys and berries from our local region.

Rocky Creek Winery on Vancouver Island has been designed around the existing ecosystem as much as possible. An area has been left untouched to allow birds, animals and insects to inhabit the existing trees in the middle of the vineyard. They minimize waste by recycling and reusing as much as possible, from composting organic waste, to reusing leftover plant pots to grow new plant cuttings.

In 1992, the 18-acre Hainle Vineyard in Peachland, BC, became the first certified organic winery in BC. Since then they have added 28 acres of vineyards that are being organically managed as well. In 2008, Hainle achieved international organic certification.

The 85-acre, certified biodynamic estate of Benziger has become a research and teaching center for the cultivation of grapes with more flavor, intensity and site-specific vineyard character. The family shares its farming knowledge and experience with their longtime growing partners throughout Sonoma County.

Felton Road in Central Otago, New Zealand, is proud to use their land not only to be sustainable, but also to maximize the biodiversity it supports. At Felton Road you will find many different varieties of cover crops in the vineyard itself, herds of goats on the hillside, and flocks of chickens foraging among the vines, all supporting sustainability.

While many producers advertise being certified biodynamic, or certified organic (or are currently working towards these certifications), others are practicing environmentally conscious production methods without formal acknowledgment. At the Hotel Grand Pacific we are pleased to offer you sustainably produced water, coffee, sake, cider, mead and wine. Look for the green dot • next to sustainably produced products.
